We are proud to offer you various seminars and programs that match the varied work we do. The event calendar lists the following seminars and programs. If you have any questions about these events, please contact us. As to-do lists, calendars help provide the illusion of organization and control over tasks and commitments. But it won't just be a calendar. At least my theory is that if you don't care about the style and layout of the calendar software or calendar format you use to track events, you probably don't need a calendar at all. Maybe it's a matter of taste or aesthetics, maybe it's a touch of OCD. But if you're a calendar man, you've got some decent options in the new year. Word has always lacked the provision of useful built-in calendar templates-- heavy on ugly design elements and light on functionality. That's why I built this bare bone template that automatically inserts dates for you based on the number of days you specify. There is room to enter your meetings and activities. And not much else. It's simple, but practical. (If you feel a note, you can put a small piece in. Snowflakes for January, whatever.) Then you have options for sniggering, kindly for Microsoft Office Online. These are prefab calendars for different applications and purposes. Forty-four. A host of academic calendars is available in Visio, Excel, Publisher, and Word format. Calendars by month, year and multi-year period. Portrait, landscape, five days, seven. A variety of incredibly ugly PowerPoint calendars, including missed lines and a kind of Madrasa carita. Lunar calendars for different time zones (who knew that the moon works like this), photo calendars, postcard calendars. And even a basic 12-month calendar in Word without a single leftist art deco design nonsense on it. If your taste goes that way. Happy calendar!
